The present invention relates to a process for the preparation of a granular or agglomerated silica gel obtained by hydrolysis and condensation of a silicon alkoxide, comprising mixing a silicon alkoxide and water in the presence of a catalyst; water to the reaction mixture; distilling the reaction mixture; precipitating the resulting silica gel in the form of granules; and drying the granules. Such a process is known in the prior art. In that process, a zeolite is used as a catalyst. It is also known to employ a granular or agglomerated silica gel having a relatively high surface area as a catalyst in the preparation of organic compounds (see, e.g., U.S. Pat. No. 5,981,911). However, in the prior art processes, a granular or agglomerated silica gel having a relatively low surface area is prepared first and then subjected to a further treatment to increase the surface area thereof. In this connection, the term "low-surface-area silica gel" means a silica gel having a relatively high content of alumina, whereby the silica gel also contains alkali metal cations or ammonium ions. The object of the present invention is to provide an improved process for the preparation of a granular or agglomerated silica gel, the period of time beginning on May 13, 1994 and ending on September 23, 1994, the total amount of water sales refunds due to Old Bridge from plaintiffs and the TMA shall be zero. The Court notes that there is no record of a meeting between counsel for plaintiffs and counsel for the defendants having occurred on May 13, 1994. However, the plaintiffs have not disputed defendants' assertion that plaintiffs requested a refund of any sales refunds received by plaintiffs prior to May 13, 1994. Although counsel for plaintiffs would have the court believe that they had filed a cross claim against the TMA in the Old Bridge action, the defendants have stated that they never received a cross claim in the Old Bridge action. In addition, counsel for plaintiffs has failed to attach a 2d92ce491b
