Paul Mauriat (born Paul J. Mauriat; December 20, 1929 September 2, 2000) was an American jazz pianist and composer. Born in New Orleans, he began playing the piano at age seven. He grew up in California where he studied with pianists Earl Hines, Art Tatum, and Art Mooney, who was a classmate of his father. He began playing in various bands, including those led by bassist Charlie Parker. He also played with a number of jazz vocalists, including Billie Holiday, when she was at the peak of her popularity. Mauriat's first recording, made in 1949, was released as The Modern Sound of New Orleans. It featured his composition, "The Moon of Madness", recorded by a ten-piece band. In 1951, he started a group called the Four Brothers and recorded two albums for Savoy. He went on to record several more albums with that group. In the 1950s, he also led the Nick Fatool band and recorded a number of albums with that band. In the 1960s, he played and recorded with vocalist Betty Carter, and also played in and recorded with Ella Fitzgerald. He continued to work as a jazz pianist after that, in addition to his work in other genres, including pop and orchestral. In the early 1960s, he worked with a number of bands and musicians, including the Paul Revere Big Band, Gerry Mulligan, and Billy Eckstine, on sessions for jazz reissues. He recorded albums with jazz vocalists Phyllis Hyman and Sarah Vaughan, and he also recorded and toured with blues singer Jimmy Reed. In the 1980s, he recorded albums with rock and pop artists such as Hall & Oates, Tina Turner, Frank Sinatra, and Roy Orbison. He also recorded and toured with pop singers Carly Simon and Dionne Warwick. Mauriat won a Grammy Award for his composition "Just the Way You Are", which was performed by Carly Simon, and he won two Golden Globe Awards for his music. In 1984, he was awarded the Lifetime Achievement Grammy Award. He also won an American Jazz Masters award in 1991, and was inducted into the Down Beat Jazz Hall of Fame in 1989, the New Orleans Music Hall of Fame in 1995, and the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences Jazz Masters Hall of Fame in 2003. His last appearance was in a performance of "The Way You Look Tonight" with the Paul Whiteman Orchestra, at the Van

The most important thing is that the original filenames are not changed. The Content-Disposition: attachment is just a hack to set the content type of the resulting file to application/octet-stream so you can save the file directly. A: Here's a simpler way using FTP: ftp -i -n -p ftp://myusername@hostname.com Explanation: ftp -i -n -p connects to the FTP server -i tells the server you're going to open an interactive session -n tells the server to transfer everything as binary so it will download an exact copy of the file and not as text -p says "Use passive mode" so it doesn't need to send the password over the connection. And just for the sake of completeness, I'll share the basic commands: transfer = Get or Put put = sends a file from local to remote server get = receives a file from remote server cd = change directory ls = list directory contents mkdir = creates a directory mv = move a file or directory rename = change the name of a file mget = gets a whole bunch of files at once quit = exit the session passive = sets up passive mode refresh = updates the listing of the directory contents Edit: After reading the FTP manual a little more carefully, I realized that the ftp command itself has the list of commands that I don't want, so I prefer to stick to the ftp -i -n -p option. Here is a detailed list of commands that are available with ftp -i -n -p: access = opens a file or directory for writing binary = send the files as binary data, so they will be exactly as they were in the FTP server cd = change the directory close = closes the connection com = sends commands to the server control = enters the control mode create = creates a file or 2d92ce491b
