Description: Thanks to Indian readers for the help in getting the right filename :-) "The government did not show any budget to the people for the proposed celebrations. With all the extra money available from the sale of the timber, forest department could have bought a big piece of land in a beautiful place and build a central place for the anniversary of country's independence," he said. The eminent historian had written to the Prime Minister expressing his concern over the lack of public interest to the celebrations which should be of prime importance. "We are not good enough to enjoy the celebrations in our own country. The government should tell the people the reasons for the celebrations," he had said. "I am not a philosopher but I feel this country is facing the danger of turning into a second Pakistan. This danger is a danger to India," he said. In fact, scholars and intellectuals of both the countries have started questioning the role of India in becoming Pakistan. Chandrachud had said that a large number of intellectuals and scholars from both the countries has been visiting Pakistan. "We are not interested in politics, but we want to understand why the people from Pakistan visit India," he said. "In 1950, we sent Lord Mountbatten to Pakistan to get the independence of Pakistan. Since then Pakistan has faced terrorist attacks and India has sent its soldiers to Pakistan's border to maintain its sovereignty," he said. "Some question the role of Indian forces in Kargil war. It is the first time in the history that Indian soldiers have entered the territory of Pakistan. This is not right. Pakistan was an independent country before 1947," he said.
