This app allows you to control the mouse on your PC using a smartphone. This is a neat and useful app that allows you to control your PC using your Android smartphone and the free Keymacro software. The mouse may not seem like a big deal, but controlling it is very useful when you want to quickly do something. When you have installed Keymacro on your PC, you will be given the option to control the mouse using the mobile app. Once you've done this, you will be able to view the software's options and configure your own gestures. The app is also able to play videos on your PC, so if you have a lot of meetings to go to, you can turn on the screen and play videos, allowing you to put all your thoughts on ice. In addition, the app can be used as a tool for video conferencing, allowing you to control your PC and use the microphone and video camera without leaving the meeting room. Keymacro can also help you interact with your PC using the keyboard, allowing you to control your emails and open files. Keymacro may not be a tool used by everyone, but the fact that it is free makes it an awesome app for many users. An important feature of the app is the accessibility of its options and functions. You can configure the app to fit the layout of your screen and you can even access the app from your tablet. Moreover, you can control the mouse using both touch and drag, as well as using your finger or a stylus. All in all, the app does its job well and it is a great solution for those who do not have an extra mouse to control their PC. Vibrational energy flow and energy transfer in the electronic relaxation of a flavin in noncovalent interactions. A theoretical study of the electronic relaxation dynamics of a flavin in the interaction with a polarizable receptor is reported. The focus is put on the connection between the vibrational relaxation of the aminoacrolein (AAR) chromophore and the dynamics of the electronic relaxation. The natural transition frequencies of the modes of the AAR chromophore are computed by means of a high-level ab initio calculation. The interaction between the AAR chromophore and a model receptor, a piperidine, is investigated by means of two-dimensional IR spectroscopy in the presence of KBr. The results are analyzed by means of the empirical coupled oscillator approach, which allows the simulation of the IR spectra in a very good qualitative agreement with the experimental spectra. The comparison of the computed IR spectra with
