
Anthony McCoy - Five Tackles

I need to extract the 26th line. A: If you know about regular expressions, you can use this regex to match the line you are interested in: `\r\s*Tally^\r`. The asterisk makes the part in between optional. This would match any line in which a number appears followed by a dot and a space. So if you extract the match, you can create an array that holds the match for each line: `$regex = [Regex]::new('\r\s*Tally^\r.'); $matches = $regex.Matches('Your text here'); $matches` will be an array containing the lines. You can read more about regular expressions here. If you want to extract the number only, you can use this regex: `\r\s*Tally^\r.*\K\d` The `\K` will stop at that position so the number will always be the last capture group. `$regex = [Regex]::new('\r\s*Tally^\r.*\K\d'); $matches = $regex.Matches('Your text here');` In this case, `$matches` will be an array that has only the matching lines. PROPOSAL SUMMARY The UAB Outcomes Core will provide scientific leadership and ensure that the CCSG and University of Alabama at Birmingham (UAB) share in the expenditures of the Outcomes module of the UAB Comprehensive Cancer Center (CECC). This Outcomes Core supports the immediate objectives of the CECC through annual membership of 10 to 12% of the CECC projects, including 2 CCSG-affiliated projects, and critical support of three to six UAB-affiliated projects. This Core also supports a pilot project program, mentoring and support for new investigators, and strategic planning for the CECC. UAB also includes University health sciences and education facilities. In 2012
