I've got an action create in a rails controller that shouldn't be allowing new submissions to be made. However, this is the behavior it is producing - any time I try to submit to the controller action (via a form in a view), I get redirected to the create action, even though it should instead redirect to the index page. Here's the relevant code: # GET /vehicles/new # GET /vehicles/new.json def new @vehicle = Vehicle.new end # POST /vehicles # POST /vehicles.json def create @vehicle = Vehicle.new(vehicle_params) if @vehicle.save redirect_to vehicles_path, notice: 'Vehicle was successfully created.' else render :new end end But when I submit a form, instead of being redirected to vehicles_path, I am being redirected to the new action. Why? Note: This behavior is being produced from a local computer using a testing suite (Rails 3.0.5 on Rails 3.0.2). I ran rake routes and there was a mention of "vehicle_path" but I can't find that map anywhere in my routes. 3da54e8ca3
